CLASS SONG

Words by ANTHONY BROSTOSKI and HENRY SPERKA

Music by DR. R. A. LASLETT SMITH

(1)

We're marching to horizons new,
Our goal will be success,
Our dreams of youth will we make true,
For learning we possess.

(chorus)

Pride of the hilltop, blue and white,
Dear Central High,
House of all knowledge shedding light,
Is Central High.
Spur to our youthful enterprise
Oh Central High.
Stands staunch and noble, helpful, wise,
Our Central High.

The way is long, and full of strife,
But learning will succeed;
For knowledge brings the fruits of life
And ignorance the weed.

Alma Mater

High above the busy city,
Far beyond all touch of ill,
Sits enthroned our Alma Mater,
Our dear Lady on the Hill.

In the glory of the morning
Burns in lines of liquid gold,
Every upward pointing tower
Like some battlement of old.

Face we boldly every crisis,
Love the need of duty done,
As our pillared Alma Mater
Boldly fronts the rising sun.

Hope of youth and pride of manhood,
Standing steadfast, strong and sure,
Guide us onward, ever upward,
Heritage of rich and poor.

Chorus:

Lift the chorus, send it swelling,
With a leal and loyal will,
And our bounty be the beauty
Of our Lady on the Hill.

HOBBIES

ALTHOUGH these troubled times barely leave room in our thoughts for anything but the nightmare that has enveloped Europe; although sufferings and heartaches are the universal emotions today, it is heartening to know that there are many sane and intelligent people who maintain the normal pattern of their lives. They are devoting their time to hobbies: the arts, music, drama, sports, and the dance, for they have faith in the future and it is right that they should.

When these tragic things are ended, can't you imagine the need for music and laughter? Those of us who keep on having hobbies will be prepared to do much toward bringing back peace and happiness. Just by keeping our minds occupied with the sensible, sane, and sometimes even the frivolous, will help us to keep our balance.

Activities, mental and physical, are a necessary part of any school program. To dance, to sing, and to take an active part in the social side of school life, are all signs of healthy and normal students. Who can deny the exhilaration of a tennis match, or the glow of friendliness that comes from just being a football fan?

We are grateful to our school for the great variety of extra-curricular activities afforded us. We have many clubs and sports directed by capable and interested advisers. A glimpse through the pages of our book will reveal to you Central's attempt to enrich our lives by sponsoring hobby interests through clubs.

Hobbies are a sign of people interested in the abundance of life. What is your hobby?

PROPHECY

HUGO SASSAFRASS, after consuming his breakfast at Nick Agoglia's restaurant, and tipping Anna Cerrato, the cashier, a nickel, went towards the City Hall to get his census Portfolio for the year 1960.

Hugo had a great deal of difficulty in arranging his route through the city due to Mayor William Whalen's confusion with the maps. He also wasted a great deal of time because citizen Sam Anello persisted in talking to the Commissioner of Public Works, Raymond Fabiano, about his gas being turned off. The Commissioner argued for a while, but, Sam being too much for him, he called for a troop of officers under the leadership of Steve Filippone to help him out.

Finally Hugo received his outline, and things were explained to him by Vice Commissioner's Third Secretary's Assistant's assistant, Nick Bellotti. Then, with his heart full of determination and his pocket full of pencils, Hugo went forth to count the 1960 population.

He went down to the corner and hailed a bus. He had to wait for a while, because George Bishop, his wife, and eight children were getting off. Then he got on. There were no empty seats, so he held a strap. He occupied his time by reading the newspaper in the hands of a clerk Peter Marapodi, where an article on the third divorce of Mary Adcock intrigued him so much that he almost missed his street.

He got off, colliding into traffic officer Louis Brown, who was busy giving a ticket to Joseph Albico for passing three red lights. The officer gave Hugo a dirty look, but let him go.

Hugo safely reached the corner of Bugaboo Avenue, and after checking his papers, he went to the first apartment house, and knocked on the door. Norman Greenstein, sleepy-eyed and droopy, came to the door. Hugo asked him his profession. Norman wanted to know why, and began to quote his rights from the Constitution. Hugo pacified him, and Norman, certain that Hugo was not a spy, allowed him to enter.

Inside, through a haze of cigar smoke, he saw a group of men playing what appeared to be a marathon pinochle game. There were several of those men whom Hugo had on his list, so he asked them some questions. He talked and wrote at the same time.

"Tom Griesi?" he asked. "Oh, you're a professional ditch-digger? Married? No, still free, eh? Ha, ha, very funny. Let's see, Christopher Lang, you are the janitor, are you? Married twice? One at a time, I hope. Gus Armenti, you are a glass blower? Married? You are? Double twins, too. You lucky, lucky man! David D'Alessio, a putty mixer downtown? Married? No, but engaged to the sweetest, loveliest—that's enough, thank you!"

Hugo wrote down some other normal answers, and thanking the gentlemen, sidled to the door. D'Alessio asked him to join the game, but Hugo preceiving the three aces up that man's sleeve, deemed it wiser not to, and left.

He walked down the hall and found Mary Joyce, the chambermaid, cleaning up a broken vase. As she wasn't on his list, he skipped her. A door at the end of the hall opened and what appeared to be four spinsters came out.

"Beg pardon," he said: "I'm the census man. Will you answer a few questions, please? Thank you. First, you're Bertha Radlowsky. Do you live alone? Oh, you all live together, do you? Your professions, please. You're a jelly apple maker, Miss Radlowsky? And you're secretary to the Chiselum & Chasum Law Firm, Miss Frances Sussman? Now, Ruth Erdfarb, your work please? Bird-seed saleslady? Thank you. And you, Gertrude Medoff?"

"Tee hee," said that lady: "I'm just a simple homebody. I cook, sew, knit, and help around the house. I hope some day to be married. By the way, are you single?"

"I ask the questions," countered Hugo, quickly. "Now, please excuse me—er—I must be going. Good day, ladies!"

Finding the door, Hugo made his exit. He had hardly stepped ten feet, when he heard a loud crash, and turning, he saw two automobiles smash into each other. Being curious, he joined the crowd.

Raymond Capsona, his head sticking through the broken windshield, was demanding his rights. Under a tree with a tire round his neck was Ed McGovern, a street cleaner, dizzily counting his limbs. The occupant of the other car, with his head jutting through the roof was Bernard Rashkes, a jewel merchant, yelling for the militia. Most prominent in the scene was a peanut vender, Robert Schmauder, selling his stock to the crowd.

Finally the scene broke up when a mounted policeman, Sidney Diamond, came up and arrested the two men for disturbing the peace.

Hugo left the arguing crowd. He crossed the street, and there he found himself looking upon another intimate scene. Several ditch-diggers were occupied in leaning on their shovels and discussing the various topics of the day. Among the chief men was Adam Alexendrowitz, a foreman, who was trying to get the men's attention back to their work; but because Morris Aliperti was telling a new joke to Michael Mandzik, he did not get anywhere. The only man who seemed to be working was Peter Racioppi, and he was filling a bucket with water.

Frank Papale, a messenger, came careening down the street on his bicycle, and Hugo, in order to escape injury, had to leap into the air. He landed on the sidewalk clumsily knocking over Vincent Inneo, a newsboy.

He apologized, and continued to walk down the avenue to his next stop. He had gotten off his track, so he went through a main thoroughfare. Passing Emma Candido's Millinery Shop, he stopped for a moment to look at a window where Georgia Kostakos was demonstrating a new potato peeler. He walked on and saw Helen Wojtowicz attempting to sell her husband the idea of buying her a new fur coat.

Hugo soon came to a large boarding house. He started to climb the stairs, but hastily stepped aside when he saw a gaunt man come tumbling down to the sidewalk, closely followed by his baggage. Hugo ascended the stairs and there faced Miss Viola Palaia who was dusting her hands.

"Is somebody leaving?" he said.

"Just that hammy actor, Henry Sperka, who hasn't paid his bill in three years!"

"I'm the census man," informed Hugo. "Could I trouble you for some information?"

Hugo followed Miss Palaia into the hall where she gave him a list of her boarders.

"Down the hall there is Mr. Stottmeister, a nutty chemist, who is always blowing himself up with his test tubes. First floor front is Geraldine Leone, a B. O. model, one of the few people who pay me rent. Down in the basement is Tony Farina working as janitor. He's a retired hobo."

There was a loud noise overhead as if somebody were kicking a chair.

"That," said Miss Palaia, "is Anthony Brostoski, an idiotic writer who has been trying to write a short story since last Christmas. On the same floor is Jack Smolsky, a chimney sweeper. Above them is Gloria Campbell, an airline hostess who also pays rent. Alphonse D'Amico, a dish-washer; Miss Mary Mazza, a chorus girl on Broadway; a Mr. Anthony Conti, a coffee tester; and a John Marchegiano, who sells jokes to television comedians also live there. Up in the attic sharing the room are Mary Lewis, a stenographer, and Dorothy Ligertwood, a Five and Ten Cent girl. That's about all, I guess, except Helen Gniedziejko, who decorates penny postcards."

Hugo wrote all that down carefully, then he rose, thanked her for her indulgence, and made his exit. Soon he met Joe Jaeger and William Hamilton, two old friends from the class of '40. He greeted them, and in short order they began to converse about the old days and old friends.

"You can't guess what happened to Violet Lind," said Hamilton. "She poses for tooth paste ads now. And Helen Lofcan is a saleslady down at Jenny Lombardy's Button Factory."

Hugo found out from Jaeger, who was a business man, that Helene Bubnowska and Mamie Casale, two classroom friends, were occupied in filing dog licenses at the City Hall.

They chatted for a while, and then bid each other farewell. Hugo passed by Domenica Marchesano's grocery store, and found Mrs. Jean DeMicco Jones, with her six bambinos purchasing some oranges.

A block away there seemed to be some excitement. Hugo perceived it to be a parade. Frank Pisciotta was blowing on his trumpet, and Al Bodian was holding up the big bass drum, while Ralph Mellilo was beating it, perspiring at the same time. Phil Magnatta completely red in the face was blowing into a large tuba, while Robert Stanton was playing the "Spirit of '76" on his fife. Before them stepped Anita Mercuri in full regalia twirling a large baton.

In the parade marched Elmer Chamberlin carrying a sign reading: "William Wood for County Dog-catcher." Directly opposing Chamberlin's party was Joe Yablonsky with a sign advertising himself for dog-catcher. The parade passed on in review, with such prominent citizens and leaders as Dorothy McGlynn of the Better Women's Gossip Club, Leo Vojnik of the Pipe-fitter's

Society, Marie DiDominick of the Corset Manufacturing Company, and George Washington, Harlem's man of the hour.

Hugo wanted to watch further, but because Theresa Brunnquell, a picket, kept jostling him, he departed without seeing the end.

He was about to go to his next prospect, when he heard the noon whistle blow. It was his lunch hour, so he wended his way down to Theresa Baun's Drug Store. He sat down at the soda fountain, and gave his order to Hazel Bryant, the head waitress. The place was very crowded, so he had to wait. He bought a soda which was mixed with some artistry by Ovedio Barrasso, the soda-jerker. Finally his order was ready, but he received the wrong one. He complained to waitress, Anne Roth, and she corrected it for him. Hugo then began to eat the chicken sandwich, but his teeth found a collar button. He called the manager, John Ransome, and had the sandwich returned. After this "main course," he began to eat his apple pie. A nervous customer, Dan Depanicis, bearing a plate of soup came behind him and suddenly knocked the contents down Hugo's back. Hugo complained to the entire personnel.

He was rather disgusted with the whole affair and decided to leave. As he passed a table, he heard Clara Ehringer sipping her soup, then brushed up against Emidio Colucci, who was spreading mustard on his frankfurter.

Hugo's next prospect lived just across Ralston Park, so he decided to take a short-cut walking through it. Harry Floria, a novelty salesman, was demonstrating a new knife sharpener to some people at the entrance. The only people that seemed to be listening were Nicolina DeAngelo and Erma DeMaio.

As he proceeded to walk through the park, his eye spotted Martin D'Urso, a gentleman of leisure, reposing on a bench. Mary Katramados and her beau were holding hands on another bench and saying sweet nothings to each other. As Hugo walked on, he came across Florence Ferrara lecturing to Gloria Foppiani on the life of a beetle. Next to them were John Marko and Vincent Marchese, two botany students, dissecting a daisy.

Under a tree having a grand picnic was Clara Agnellino, a housewife, dishing up some doughnuts to Sal Cafaro, a soap demonstrator. Others in the party were Rose Calabrese, a hair-dresser, who was busy drinking coffee; Katie Miller, a telephone operator, busily chewing a sandwich; and Fanny Cheltsos, a laundress, who was enjoying a piece of mince pie. Behind these people under the tree were Marie Caprio, a toothpick designer, and Christella Chirgotis, a doll maker, occupied in gossiping about the others.

Hugo walked on and came upon three recent fathers pushing three large perambulators. One, Tom Osborne, argued that his son was better than Ed Flannagan's boy, while Flannagan, in turn, claimed his was better. On the sidelines stood Rocco Perna, the father of a girl, saying nothing, but feeling his position acutely.

Under the statue of Columbus stood Stanley Romana making a speech on a soap box. He was expressing his views on the government to Martin Mehron a paper picker, and Nelson Popp, an office clerk, both of whom seemed ready to argue the opposite.

Soon Hugo came to the small zoo in Ralston Park, where he found Lucy Clarizio attempting to feed a giraffe. Opposite her was Richard Morse laughing at a monkey, who in turn was laughing at him. Ruth Trost, a Republican, was feeding peanuts to an elephant, while Donofrio, a Democrat, kept looking for the donkey. At the lion's cage, William Watts was showing his wife how brave he was by petting the lion's tail. Most prominent of all the visitors was Abe Sherman, the father of six girls, throwing stones at the stork.

Reaching the street, Hugo crossed over to the polo games, where he found a multitude of society people. He was stopped at the gate by Albert Ott, the ticket-taker, but he managed to explain his way in. A polo game was in progress, with Rocco Napoli astride a white horse, knocking the ball into the grandstand, causing Josephine Rappa and Sarah Thompson to jump under the benches in fright. Around the field trying to control their horses were William Tierney and Joseph Tafro, and sitting on the group looking at his frisky runaway, was Frank Rosa.

Hugo was impressed with the celebrities. There were Raymond Peters, the Famous Profile; Elouise Echols, the great butter heiress; Louise Scapati of the Coconut Scapati Clan; Guido Scavone, the opera singer; Frances Schaen, the soup strainer heiress; Doris Haight the radish queen; Marie George, the overdue debutante; and Eugene Brodean, the surrealistic painter.

Helen Robertson looking through her monocle at Sophie Mastakas talked about the stock market, while her escort, Walter Corby, did his best not to yawn. Betty Shelley picked up a horseshoe for luck; while looking at the ladies' hats with perplexity, was Dorothy Riley.

A shop whistle blew, and Hugo realized that his day was over.

This completed his day's quota so Hugo wended his way towards City Hall. As he turned up the avenue, he met the various other census takers returning in groups. He made the acquaintances of Jennie Stella, counter of the East Side; Angelino Zarro, counter of the North; Delia Bell, counter of the South, and Margaret Volz, counter of the suburbs.

"I had a fine day," said Dora Ventola. "I went to the baseball games. Female softball was played today. The umpire was booed fifteen times, and Pauline Zenga made two runs. Eleanor Wayton, the second baseman, lost her compact in two plays. And the way Antoinette Vesposo and Lydia Thierry caught those flies! Well t'was thrilling."

All the other census takers bragged about the people they had met, but Hugo, a true Central Alumnus, played modest, and said nothing. Two hours later, he passed in his list of interviews and discovered, to his surprise, that he had spent the day in talking to people who had been interviewed by every other census taker in the city.

A Letter To Love

Love, stay away from me.
I have no need of thee!
Some boys may fall for a dreamy face,
And sigh and eye all day;
But with me that is not the case
So stride and glide away.
Love makes your appetite quite slack,
Love makes the sunshine look quite black,
And makes you talk like a maniac
Saying: "Snookums, dove, peachy-pie,
Cutums, oo love me or I die?
Snooky-pooky, my custard-pie!"
Oh, no!

Love, stay away from me.
I want no part of thee!
Some boys can hold those little hands,
And groan and moan all day;
But "Go, scram, shoo," are my demands,
Just go and flow away;
For I still want to feel I'm free,
I want no female chasing me,
Or hear the voice of some close She
Saying: "Snookum, sweet, honey lamb,
Pet, do oo like me like I am?
Oh, sugar, ducky, wooly lamb!"
Oh, gosh!

Love, go away from me.
I'll take no part of thee!
Great lovers can have their earthly bliss,
Their dreams and schemes so sweet.
But what comes after that first kiss?
Oh! "Go, flow," I repeat.
I like to have my food and rest,
To me romance is just a pest,
For cooing females I detest
Who say: "Dovey, sweet, pumpkin pie,
Mouse, oo do like me or I cry?
Oh, sugar lambkins, apple pie!"
Oh, please!
Love, stay away from me.
I want no part of thee!

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

WE, the members of the Class of January 1941 of Central High School, being of sane mind, and after careful cogitation, do assemble on this occasion, to dare this to be our last Will and Testament, to which we challenge all heirs, herein, to accept the following magnanimous bequests:

ARTICLE I

- Section 1: To Mr. Rolfe, we leave our sincerest wishes for his continued success as Superintendent of Newark public schools.
- Section 2: To Mr. Ralston, we do bequeath our deepest appreciation for making our years at Central memorable ones.
- Section 3: To our Senior Advisers, Miss Potas and Mr. Haeseler, we leave our generous thanks for their splendid cooperation and guidance toward making our graduation an unblemished success.
- Section 4: To Mr. Schleicher, we leave a brand new rocking chair, so that there won't be any more danger of his slipping during class orations.
- Section 5: To Mrs. Heller, we bestow an extra pair of shoulders on which prospective students may find consolation.

ARTICLE II

- Section 1: To the Senior "B's," we bequeath the difficult task of reconciling the school to our departure.
- Section 2: To the Juniors, we give a pair of protective goggles as a shield against that terrific water pressure at the Central Soda Fountain.
- Section 3: To the Sophomores, poor things, we leave long homework assignments, especially on weekends. (Aren't we mean?)
- Section 4: To the Freshmen, we leave the following advice:
1. Don't come to school early; you might get lonesome.
 2. Don't make up your homework after an absence; it doesn't pay to be too different.
 3. Don't run in the halls; you'll get there anyway.

ARTICLE III

- Section 1: To the students of History, we leave the job of learning about the Democratic principles in a Republic, analyzing the Constitution and Declaration of Independence, and applying all this to Problems of Today.
- Section 2: To the students of Biology, we leave half a frog each; one frog's leg is enough for anybody's lunch.
- Section 3: To the students of Chemistry, we leave Ionization, Valence, and Qualitative Analysis; also, a little explosion now and then to keep things alive.

In witness, whereof, we leave at your mercy, the following list of names. Duly signed, sealed, and presented, this momentous day in January 1941, we rightfully declare this, our Class Will.

(Signed)

CLASS OF JANUARY 1941

WITNESSES:

Genevieve Crispina

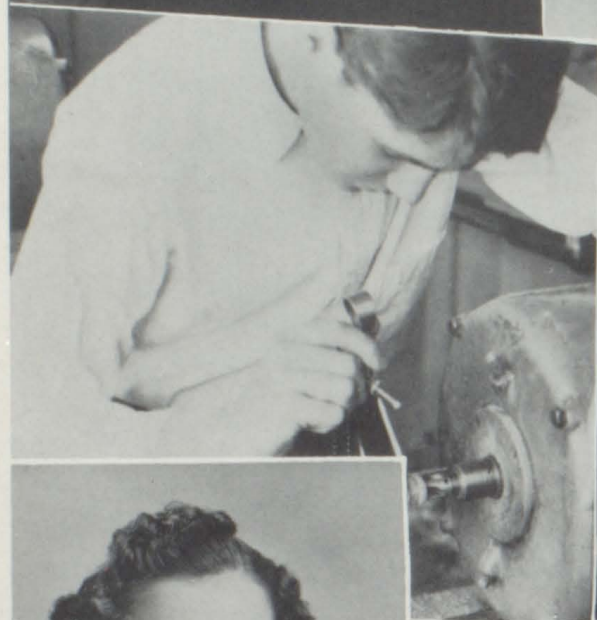

Marjorie Gokey

Howard Siegel

Fannie Chletsos

Bessie Staikos

For Better Or Worse

Miss Gen Crispina has eyes so bright.

Eugenia Buczak is a sprite.

We brighten up when she's in sight,

Demure Miss Margy Gokey.

Eileen Mullaney has flaming hair.

Mathilda Moore's disposition is rare.

Whom do you think I see over there?

Polite Miss Hilda Brosseder.

Reserved Ruth Curtiss is well-known.

Fern Graf has talent as she has shown.

I doubt if A. Shubert an inch has grown.

Original Miss Balashek.

Mild voice of Redeker is a delight,

Her smile is sweet her heart is light.

How very pleasing to the sight

Is pretty Miss Lankhorst.

Pearl Fern's continuous and contagious grin

Will always let some sunshine in,

So call for her when classes are dim.

Cheerful Miss Doris Allen.

Miss Pauline Russo is full of fun,

She has a joke for everyone.

While S. Kowaldo pulls a clever pun

With laughing Mildred Peters.

Jean Zetwick is too gentle and meek,

Yet light of heart and red of cheek.

And one who doesn't often speak

Is quiet Ruth Daneshefsky.

M. Nonnemacker is always neat,

The girls all think she's very sweet.

Now, here's a girl you've got to meet,

Delightful Anne Micchelli.

There's Jane Terwilliger, who flirts so much

With all the boys, and teacher, and such.

Oh, Jane, look out, you'll get in Dutch!

Inquisitive Lois Sparkes.

Marie La Porta is dark and tall

When near A. Mercuri, so small.

She's kind and gracious to us all,

Our pleasant Ada Iuspa.

Miss Isabelle Tefank loves to say,

"Why must we learn this?" most every day.

She's full of fun and full of play

Invincible Claire Hattersley.

Ar Kessler's pleasant as she can be,

She's nice to all, as you can see;

While spreading joy is the policy

Of amiable Clara Snyder.

Marie George seems reserved and shy,

And makes you shake your head and sigh,

Yet, it's the truth, she's very spry.

Miss "Capable" Gerry Rodgers.

Blond Wanda Bomba loves to dote

On people who get her goat;

While always bundled in a coat

Cold-blooded Bessie Staikos.

Marge Buzas is a football fan,

Or could it be a football man?

To be a good wife is the plan

Of lovable Julia Bambor.

Petite El. Stephens just hates to leave

Her Alma Mater, watch her grieve;

She's really laughing up her sleeve

With Helen Ryan and Rosie Munz.

Phyl Bongo's gay and sunny smile

Will keep you happy all the while.

O, many a heart does she beguile,

Our "Scarlett" Ruthie Stoffers.

Marie Mignelli's a sweet little lassy,

And Eleanor Dillon's never sassy;

We know Pat Bowden's more than passy.

Dependable Yolanda Berardelli.

Central's Graduating Athletes

With the graduation of the Class of January 1941, our Alma Mater will lose many of her outstanding athletes. Departing from the football team will be such stalwarts as Gus Armenti, an all-city man; Pete Racioppi, Joe Matera, George Washington, Sam Anello, Ken Lueddeke, Jack Villee, and Al Shields.

On the basketball front, the only star receiving a diploma will be the formidable Nick Agoglia.

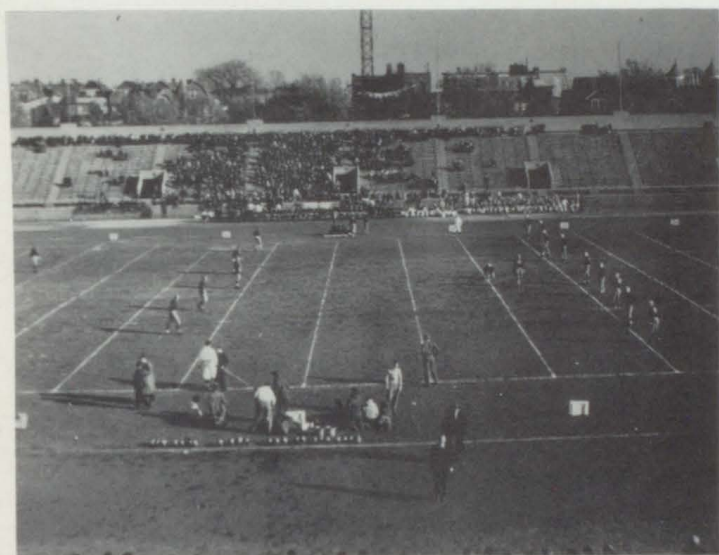

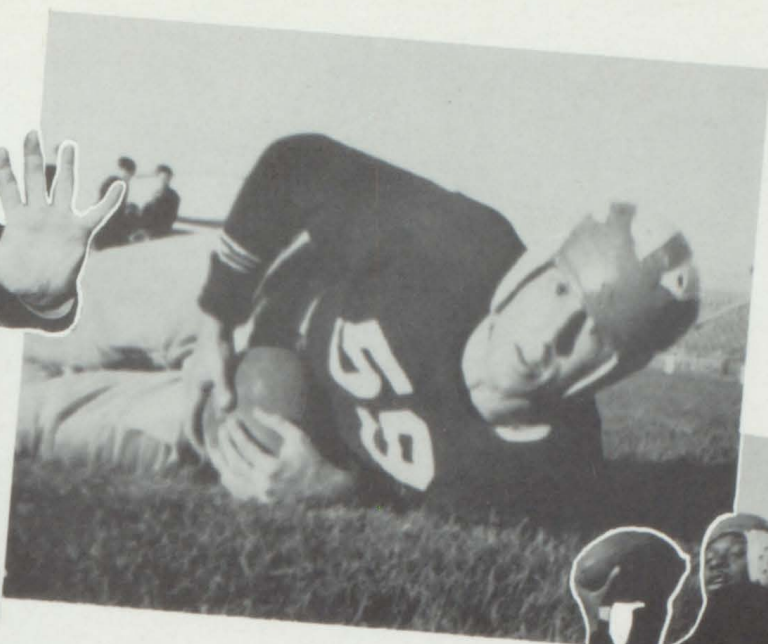

At the advent of the baseball season, such reliables as John Daubert, all-state first baseman; Len Ruscito, Walt Krill, Larry Pollare, and Abe Savino will be missing.

The cross-country team will lose its diminutive captain and city champ, Jack Skidmore, along with Marc Miller and Bill White.

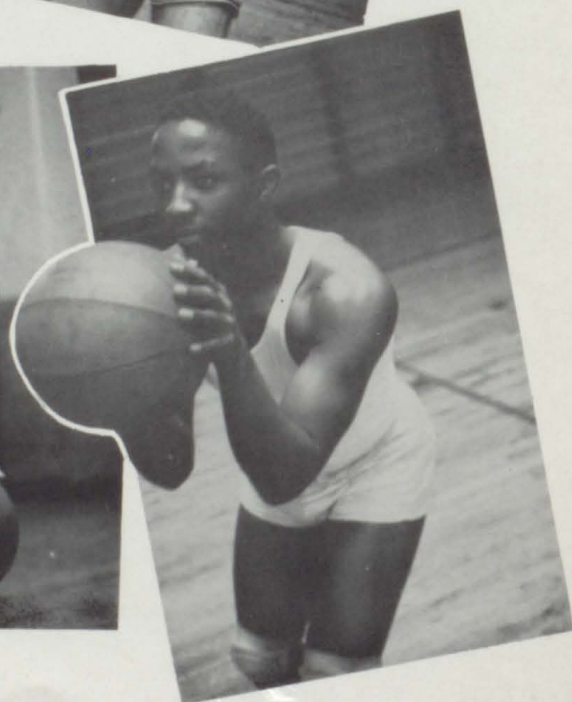

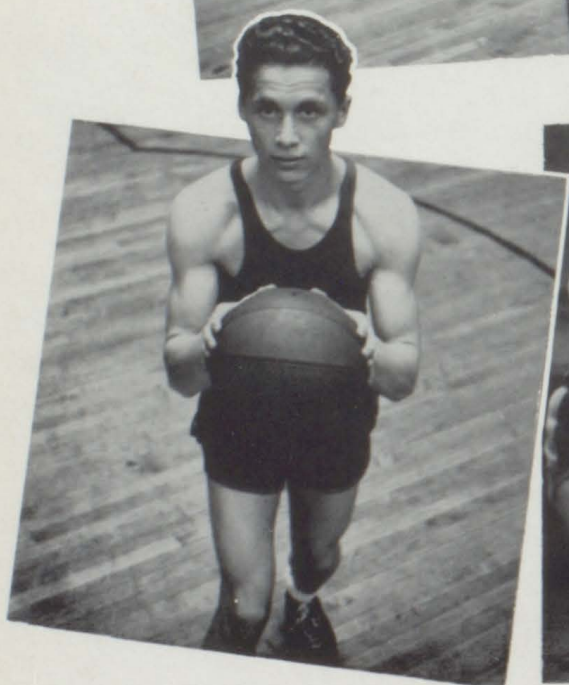

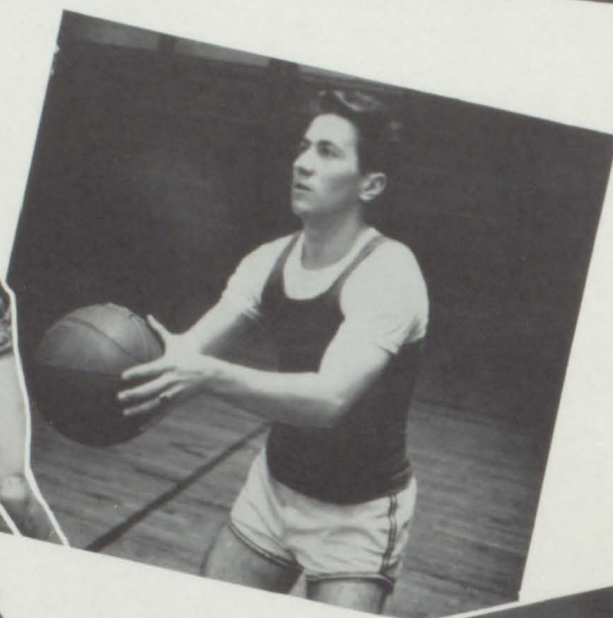

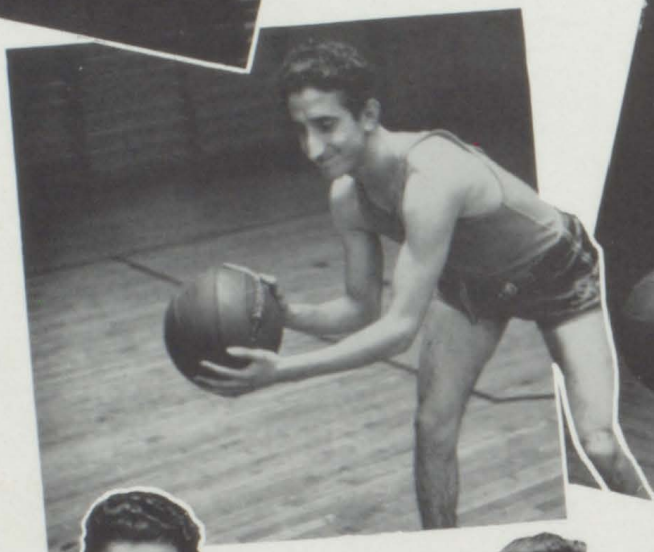

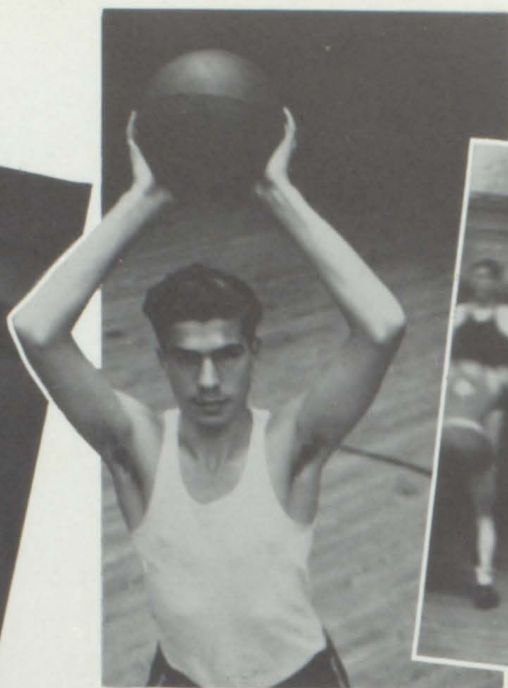

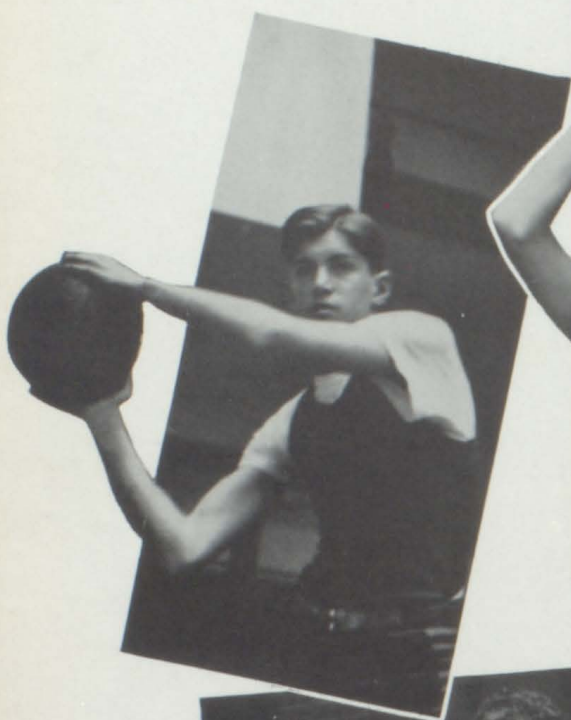

At the opening of the swimming season, Alex Babola, Tom Osborne, and Bernard Donnerstag will not answer the gun because of graduation.

These athletes now bid adieu to Central with the thought that they were only too glad to perform under Central's banners and with the hope that the boys to come will raise her name to even greater heights in scholastic sport circles.

FAREWELL TO GRADUATES

TODAY, we stand atop the Mountain of Achievement; the long climb is at an end. Ever since our entrance into Central High School, the crest seemed far beyond our reach. Now, that the time has come to say farewell to our beloved Alma Mater, we are overjoyed; but mingled with this feeling is a strange void. Can it be that we are not as anxious to leave as we once thought we would be?

We have created numerous friendships, participated in extra-curricular activities, welcomed new teachers, and enjoyed our school days.

Now, as sedate seniors, we can recall with amusement our experiences as timid freshmen, boisterous sophomores, and cocky juniors. Although at times the climb was somewhat rough and strenuous, it proved to be a worthy journey.

However, what will the other side of the "mountain" be like? Reveries of yesteryear are soon displaced by the hopes, ambitions, and thoughts of the future. Will the dreams now on the threshold of realization come true? Ah, if only we could gaze into the magic crystal which foretells all!

For those who succeed there are some who fail,
In battles with life there are losers.
The Road to Success is but a small trail
With a limited space for the users;
The way seems long and weary and endless,
And there are few that accomplished their deeds.
At times the lonely traveler is friendless,
And only the steadfast one succeeds.
Farewell, farewell, fellow graduates.

ROSE Gamba

We wish to take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation to the Central High School students for their confidence in appointing us official photographers to the January 1941 "Cog 'n' Pen."

It has been a distinct pleasure to work with the editor and staff in producing what we believe to be an outstanding yearbook.
